

CORBETT-FITZSIMMONS.

A Wonderful Reproduction of the Famous Fight at Carson City.

Corbett and Fitzsimmons met in their great contest last night at the Babbitt opera house. It was plainly noticed that Corbett had the best of the fight up to and including the sixth round, when things commenced coming Fitzsimmons' way. He gave Corbett no peace, but followed him around the ring until the fourteenth round, when he is seen to get in the famous knock-out blow and goes down. His frantic efforts to get up, as he crawls toward the ropes and raises himself to his feet are plainly reproduced.

It is by means of the wonderful veriscope that these actual scenes are reproduced. There is nothing missing from the time the men enter the ring. Not an expression. The putting on of the gloves, introducing the men, official referee, official time keepers, etc., are all plainly seen. This reproducing actual moving life is certainly a scientific wonder. The fourteenth round is repeated slowly, so that the audience can see the knock-out blow and the alleged foul blow as it is gradually delivered. This part of the show is extremely fascinating. It also explains much as to how such moving life scenes can be reproduced.

Mr. W. K. Wheelock, who was the manager of the contest at Carson City, Nev., was present and explained in an interesting manner many features of the contest. He is on his way with the outfit from Australia to New York, and this is the only stop made between Los Angeles and Albuquerque.

Many ladies were interested spectators, as this gives them their only chance to see what takes place in a prize ring. Last performance tonight.

Greater New York Star Vaudeville Co.

Next Monday evening, October 24th, at Babbitt's Opera house, the above company will give one performance. It was the intention to show three nights, but the theater being engaged before hand it is only possible to show one night. The company consists of fourteen high class artists. From newspaper clippings before us we see that this company has played to great success and crowded houses throughout California and Oregon. Among the performers are two clever musical boys, two bicycle performers, two song-and-dance teams, two Irish performers and three singers, who all do their own special acts. The price of admission will be 50 cents and $1. Reserved seats on sale at the Flagstaff Cash Store.

Holbrook's Petrified Forest.

The vigorous efforts that have been put forth by some of the Holbrook citizens, notably Messrs. Zuck and Barnes, to have the national government set apart the petrified forest near this place as a national park is at last bearing fruit. Mr. W. C. Barnes this week received a communication from Forest Superintendent Benedict asking for further information as to the amount of land necessary to cover the entire park and other data necessary for the carrying out of the national idea, which Mr. Barnes answered as fully as possible. It is worth while to say that one year ago Governor Murphy succeeded in having the land around the forest withdrawn from entry under the land laws, and last year Governor Murphy and Mr. Barnes called on Commissioner Hermann in Washington and had a long interview with him on the subject. It is a matter of congratulation that this move is at last to be carried into effect. — Holbrook Argus.
